ve Balance of Season's Wages Coin—Men Urged to Take They Wanted It or Not

mostly in gold coin, nearly all of which was immediately paid out. In speaking about this large pay day Captain Brelle said:

"Of course, the men in the employ of Mr. Manley have drawn considerable money all summer, always getting what they wanted when they asked for it. But as it is now nearing the end of the season it was deemed advisable to pay off the men and get their accounts off the books. The result is that the men have to take their money whether they wish to or not."

inks Winter Road to Sullivan Creek

The Alaska Road Commission has a force of men working on the Sullivan creek trail from this city, and they expect to have a highway second to none in Alaska by the time the snow flies for fair. A thousand dollars has been appropriated for this work, and should be sufficient to put the road in first-class condition.

Considerable freight will be carried over this trail this winter, and the miners and freighters will appreciate the efforts of the government to give them a good road.

FREIGHT NOT ALL LANDED

Just a fifty tons of supplies will have to be as a will about a year ago, and since then a busy summer season has been spent in the city. Mr. Manley, a mining merchant, was a visitor in the city during the early days of the week.

Mayor Doolittle, of Summit City, one of Hot Springs, promising substitute, was a visitor in the city last Sunday.

Among the recent arrivals in Hot Springs are Mr. and Mrs. W. Sam Clark, who have purchased a comfortable home on South Front street and are now residing therein. Mr. Clark has been mining on Tenderfoot creek during the past two seasons, but in the future he will operate in this vicinity. This popular couple received a hearty welcome in Hot Springs from many old-time friends.

Charley Bosworth, for the past six months a popular employe about the Manley farm, left this week for Chena, where he will spend the winter months. Charley is a first-class gentleman, and made many friends while in the city.

W. P. Wilson, who suffered a severe cut on his foot the early part of the month, and is now a patient in a hospital, is doing very nicely and expects to be out in a short time.

Harry Thornhill and J. E. Baker arrived in Hot Springs recently and have since been busily engaged in taking over the mercantile business of the Hot Springs Trading Post for the N. C. Co. Both gentlemen are well and favorably known to old timers in Alaska, and their coming is welcomed by all.

Mrs. E. J. Ives and little daughter Luella returned home recently from a protracted visit with relatives in the states.

Manley Farm Is Closed for Season

The Manley farm operations have been closed for the season and all the products are now being stored for the winter in the "roothouse" (well, that's what Buly Brelle called it, anyhow).

Mr. Drake, the building contractor, has completed the exterior work of the building, and the interior finishing work of the interior represents the labor of Marshal Drake's assistant, J. J. Chinola.

Will Prospect on Cooney Creek

Lynn Smith will leave next week for Cooney creek where with his partners will thoroughly prospect their holdings on that stream.

Mr. Smith and his partners discovered some remarkably good prospects on the creek last winter, and he is fully convinced that this winter a pay streak rivaling anything in the country will be found on Cooney.

There will be about twenty men prospecting on different parts of the creek during the entire winter, and all are optimistic as to the outlook.

The local superintendent of the Alaska road commission received instructions from headquarters yesterday to proceed with the preliminary work of constructing the road between Kaltag and the Innoko, says the Nome Nugget.

Mr. Goodwin and Mr. Macpherson, the investigator who is now here, have both traveled over the ground and examined the conditions, with the result that both recommend the building of the thoroughfare. The road is part of the trunk system which will be installed between the coast and Nome, and which will have its other terminus at Seward.

It is expected that a large force of men will be employed there next spring, but the work will mostly consist of cutting timber and corduroying. The sum of $2,000 has been appropriated for the work.
